Our mission is to build a welcoming community and create opportunities where Latino families can belong, contribute, and succeed.
Our mission is to build a welcoming community and create opportunities where Latino families can belong, contribute, and succeed.
Hello, hello,

It is with great pride I share Conexión Americas’ 2019 Annual Report. As you will see in the following pages, our work continues to be guided by our core mission of eliminating barriers to ensure all Latinos can belong, contribute, and succeed.

The work of today is anchored in our commitment to the next generation of Tennesseans, of knowing that our actions have incredible influence in our schools, our neighborhoods, healthcare system, and above all, our own families.

As you already know, 2019 was a year of transitions. Not only at Conexión Américas, but in our city, and our country. We felt the pain of the March tornado and today we are adapting to a new reality shaped by COVID-19. As you read these pages, I invite you to honor the work we have done together to rise above uncertainty and continue to serve with ganas and grace. For more information on our response to COVID-19, please see the Work of Now 2020 Update.

Conexión Américas brought me back to Nashville and I am beyond proud of the amazingly talented and committed team that makes our work possible.

Thank you for your support.

We are stronger because of you and I look forward to meeting you in person at Casa Azafrán.

In gratitude,

Juliana Ospina Cano
Executive Director | Conexión Américas

Parents as Partners

Now, in its 11th year, Conexión Américas’ nationally recognized Padres Comprometidos (Parents as Partners) program supports immigrant parents as they encounter and learn to navigate the American school system. Immigrant parents come to the United States with dreams that their children receive a great education—but the path to achieving that goal isn’t always clear. Through a 9-week workshop series led by volunteer parent facilitators, parents learn how to better advocate for their child in the US education system, and reclaim their role as their child’s best teacher.

SPOTLIGHT:

Yazmin Rivera | Volunteer Facilitator Since 2018

As a young mother newly arrived to the US, Yazmin began her journey with Padres Comprometidos in 2015 through a workshop series at Whitsitt Elementary.

“My son was seven years old when I first participated in the program. It opened my eyes and helped me in my son’s life in school, and also helped me personally. I felt like I didn’t know how to be a mother, and Padres Comprometidos helped me form my identity, and to be more confident.”

I’m a Mexican daughter, but I’m an American mother within the US culture.”

SPOTLIGHT:

Elizabeth Narváez Vega

A recent graduate of Belmont University, Elizabeth Narváez Vega was a member of Conexión Americas’ first Escalera class at Glencliff High School. Now a College Access Coordinator at Conexión Americas, Elizabeth leads the very program she graduated from at Glencliff.

“Escalera helped me gain the language to understand what it means to be a first generation student and what that meant for my educational career and identity. One of my biggest goals for my students is for them to find community, to feel empowered, and know they’re college ready.”

280 High school students in afterschool programming

College Success

As graduates from our Escalera College Access program go on to pursue higher education, they receive one-on-one mentoring from Conexión Americas College Success Coaches.

Our coaches support the persistence and completion of college and post-secondary pursuits for first generation, immigrant, and refugee young adults.

SPOTLIGHT:

Ricardo Cresencio

A freshman at UT Knoxville, Ricardo Cresencio is a first generation, Mexican American, transgender student. Ricardo graduated from Cane Ridge High School and participated in Conexión Americas’ Escalera college access program.

“"For me, the program has meant having a good sense of community, the importance of having a community that shares similar experiences with me—especially attending a predominantly white school. I’ve stayed involved because I like the environment and it’s motivating to hear other’s life experiences and future goals."

Migrant Education Program

From the tobacco fields and poultry processing plants of East Tennessee, to the cotton and soybean fields of West Tennessee, the Migrant Education program ensures children of migrant agricultural farm work receive a quality education. By identifying and recruiting migratory children, the Migrant Education Program provides tutoring, homework help, and referrals and information to students and their families.

SPOTLIGHT:

Harvest Festival

In November of 2019, the Migrant Education Program hosted its first Harvest Festival, which included a gallery of photographs taken by migratory students. Through their lens, we see the stories of children and families with transient lives, their hard work, and resilience.

The gallery featured an incredible series of photographs taken by Jovani Ivan Rodriguez, a talented young photographer and migrant student interning with Conexión Américas in rural East Tennessee.

Summer Camps + Leadership Institute

To further enrich migrant children’s education, the Migrant Education Program organizes several summer camps across the state for children and youth of all ages, including a stay at East Tennessee State University for high school students.

4 Camp Sites:

Macon County • Hamblen County • Rhea County • East TN State University

Adult Education

Adult students representing a variety of linguistic backgrounds hone their English speaking skills in our evening English classes. Offered three terms a year, Conexión Américas’ English classes are in high demand.

Through our Computer Lab, Spanish speaking adults learned the basics of using a computer, to more advanced techniques in programs such as Microsoft Word, Excel, and Quickbooks.

In special workshops, aspiring business owners focused on creating businesses in the painting and cleaning industries, while in Nosotras, a series of empowerment workshops for women, participants learned to set and achieve goals.

Taxes

The only free and Spanish speaking tax preparation site in Nashville, Conexión Américas and a team of volunteers through Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) help hundreds of families file their taxes each spring. Through the year, we also assist families in applying for an Individual Taxpayer Identification Number (ITIN) – an essential component for taxpaying residents without social security numbers.

Hispanic Heritage Month

During our Hispanic Heritage Month ceremony we recognized several community members for their work supporting Tennessee’s Latino immigrant community.

This past year we awarded three Orgullo Hispanos, or Hispanic Pride, awards recognizing unsung heroes in our community: Latino adults or young people who have been persistently working to better their immediate neighborhood, school, work place, nonprofit, or civic organization. The Amigo/a We Love award recognizes a non-Latino individual whose meaningful work, efforts, or voice have promoted the vision of a welcoming Nashville and Tennessee where Latinos and immigrants are embraced as integral members of our communities.

Protecting Our Families

Mixed-status families — those with family members with precarious immigration statuses live in constant fear of being separated from their loved ones because of increased federal immigration enforcement actions. To protect families and better prepare them in case of an emergency, such as detention or deportation, Conexión Américas assists families in the creation of a Family Plan. Through a Family Plan, families learn their civil rights and draw up powers of attorney (POA) for care of their children and financial assets in the US.

CREATING A WELCOMING COMMUNITY

Welcoming America Panel

Along with Casa Azafrán partners the Tennessee Immigrant and Refugee Rights Coalition, Neighborhood Health, the American Muslim Advisory Council, the Global Education Center, and Tennessee Justice for Our Neighbors, we gathered to speak about our work of building a welcoming community. During a conversation moderated by David Plazas, The Tennessean’s Director of Opinion and Engagement, we discussed current obstacles and opportunities the immigrant community faces in Tennessee.

ORGULLO HISPANO:

Keitlyn Alcantara | Orgullo Hispano Award Winner

Keitlyn founded Sazón Nashville, a program that shares traditional Latinx and indigenous foods with youth and the broader community. Beyond just teaching them about traditional foods, she has worked with our middle school youth to explore their identities through art, writing, and even growing herbs and vegetables.

AMIGOS WE LOVE:

The Nashville Welcoming Committee | Amigo/a We Love Award Winner

The Nashville Welcoming Committee, a diverse grassroots coalition of individuals, faith communities, labor and political organizations, and immigrant justice groups started in October 2018. The group is part of a larger network of communities across the country mobilizing in solidarity with people and families being released from border detention centers into cities around the US. With over 150 volunteers, the Nashville Welcoming Committee worked to welcome immigrants and refugees traveling from the US-Mexico border through Nashville by providing food, supplies, and hospitality.

ORGULLO HISPANO:

Cesar Virto | Orgullo Hispano Award Winner

It’s not easy to share our stories in such a public and vulnerable way, but Cesar does so bravely. Cesar grew up in small town Alabama, but was born in Mexico. One of the hundreds of thousands of DACA recipients in the US, Cesar has been a fierce advocate for DACA recipients in Nashville and across the country.

In opinion pieces in the Tennessean and nationally in Politico, Cesar shares candidly about his experience finding out he was undocumented, how receiving DACA opened so many doors, and the hurt he feels when people tell him he doesn’t belong in a country he has always known as home.

ORGULLO HISPANO:

Gabi Castillo | Orgullo Hispano Award Winner

As part of our Protecting Our Families program, we have partnered with the Davidson County Clerk’s office to help families apply for passports for their US citizen children.

Thanks to advocates like Gabi, a former Conexión Américas board member, the Davidson County Clerk’s office has come to our office at Casa Azafrán to assist hundreds of families apply for passports in Spanish at a familiar place. With her support and the support of the Davidson County Clerk’s office, we can continue to provide families with access to vital documents necessary for reunification in case of detention or deportation.

Gabi Castillo | Orgullo Hispano Award Winner

As part of our Protecting Our Families program, we have partnered with the Davidson County Clerk’s office to help families apply for passports for their US citizen children.

Thanks to advocates like Gabi, a former Conexión Américas board member, the Davidson County Clerk’s office has come to our office at Casa Azafrán to assist hundreds of families apply for passports in Spanish at a familiar place. With her support and the support of the Davidson County Clerk’s office, we can continue to provide families with access to vital documents necessary for reunification in case of detention or deportation.

110 families served
225 passports applied for
4 passport workshops

Since 2014, staff from the Salahadeen Center (SCN), Conexión Americas, the Greater Nashville Regional Council (GNRC), and other leaders of the Envision Nolensville Pike Collaborative have led community engagement activities to document transportation challenges and possible solutions along Nolensville Pike.

With support from Metro Arts and ArtPlace America, local artists designed and painted the Little Kurdistan Community Mural on the side of the Mazi Market off Nolensville Pike next door to the Salahadeen Center. In Little Kurdistan, you’ll find the Salahadeen Center, a number of traditional markets, and restaurants and shops owned and run by members of Nashville’s Kurdish community—the largest Kurdish community in the United States. These thriving community centers and local businesses provide the thousands of Kurds living in Nashville the resources necessary to maintain their Kurdish identity despite the thousands of miles between middle Tennessee and the Greater Kurdistan region.

The Little Kurdistan Mural is an exciting addition to our community—it reflects our neighborhood identity and celebrates Kurdish culture.

Youth Engagement

Through a Design Your Neighborhood internship in partnership with the Nashville Civic Design Center and the Metro Public Health Department, 16 Kurdish and Latino high school students teamed up to survey the needs of pedestrians along the stretch of Nolensville Pike by the Salahadeen Center. The internship culminated with a quick build walking path installed to increase pedestrian safety and traffic. The path was established after working with Metro Public Works and Metro Planning to secure the necessary permits and approval. Students observed an overall increase in pedestrians after the installation of the walking path.

Festival Familiar

Over 250 families enjoyed the sunshine at Azafrán Park while connecting with resources from Casa Azafrán partners, city agencies, and other social service organizations. Children played in the park’s splash pad and engaged in arts and crafts, and science experiments under the pavilion.

Azafrán Park Farmers Market

Partnering with the Nashville Farmers’ Market, local vendors sell fresh produce, homemade hot sauce, paletas, baked goods, and other homemade products all summer long at the weekly Azafrán Park Farmers’ Market.

Every year as part of our annual Hispanic Heritage Month Celebration, high school students from across Tennessee are invited to participate in our essay contest for young Latina/o writers. The purpose of this contest is to listen to the voices of young people reflecting on the theme, “My Hispanic Roots, My American Dream.”

MY HISPANIC ROOTS, MY AMERICAN DREAM:

Carmela Plata-Sanchez

Carmela Plata-Sanchez (second from left) is a 10th grade student at Bledsoe County High School in Dayton, Tennessee. Growing up in rural Tennessee, Carmela writes about how proud she is of her heritage and the difficulties of working in the field.

To me, being Hispanic is an honor, even though I have gone and will have to go through years of discrimination. It does not weaken me. It makes me powerful. I am not ashamed of my skin color, because it holds the pain of my forefathers, who had to bear the scorch of the sun on their backs as they picked tomatoes, trying to earn money for their next meal. It holds the tans, sunburns and cracks in their skin they have endured to provide for their family. I show off my skin now when I walk the halls with my arms bared and my head held high.

Keysi Lacunza

Keysi Lacunza, a senior at John Overton High School, wrote about her own American dream.

Mi sueño americano es tener la educación que faltó para tener una vida menos difícil. Mi sueño americano está aquí, en donde podré ayudar a mi familia que vive en la tierra que amo. Estaré cumpliendo mi deber con mi patria, a la vez agradeciendo esta patria por las oportunidades que me brinda. Ahora puedo hacer algo, tengo un sueño americano y mexicano por cumplir. Esto es poder ayudar a otros a obtener una mejor educación que les permita elegir su tierra del sol. Que no haya una línea medio borrosa que les divida el corazón entre Aquí o Allá.

My American dream is to get the education needed to live a less difficult life. My American dream is here, where I’ll be able to help my family who lives in the country that I love. I’ll be fulfilling my duty with my home country, while being grateful to this country for the opportunities it offers me. Now, I can do something – I have an American and a Mexican dream to fulfill. This is being able to help others to get a better education that enables them to choose their own land. That there will be no half blurry line that divides their hearts between here and there.

MY HISPANIC ROOTS, MY AMERICAN DREAM:
Jessky Guevara | Finalist

A junior at Lead Academy, Jessky Guevara wrote nostalgically about her home country of Honduras in English and Spanish, and about her American dream.

¿Qué es el sueño americano? Ese sueño no solo está representado en una mejor vida o educación, está reflejado en cada madre soltera cuyos ojos transmitten cansancio. Mi madre, cuyas palabras de aliento eran “hay que echarle ganas porque la vida está difícil”. Está reflejado en cada gota de sudor que marca su camino en la frente de ese noble trabajador, en ese niño el cual hacer amigos no es su mayor miedo el primer día de escuela, sino el no saber el lenguaje ni la cultura.

But what is the American dream? That dream not only represents a better life or education, it is reflected in every single mother whose eyes portray tiredness. My mother, whose words of encouragement were, “we must put in effort, because life is hard.” It’s reflected in each drop of sweat that marks its path on the forehead of that noble laborer, in that child whose worst fear the first day of school is not the ability to make friends, rather not knowing the language or the culture.

MY HISPANIC ROOTS, MY AMERICAN DREAM:
Juan José Escamilla Vargas | Finalist

Juan José Escamilla Vargas, a 10th Grader at Valor College Prep, wrote about his family’s struggles and sacrifices making his American dream possible.

I've been lucky to have both parents to morally support me. I always worked alone throughout my childhood, never having any support due to my parents' lack of English and my lack of any older siblings. They never gave up in making sure I gave it my 100% effort in everything I did. Their kindness, belief in the toughest situations, and their everlasting hope made me more determined to strive to be the person that I am today. It's because of them I do everything I do, and they're the reason why they remind me of my American Dream.

Conexión Next is a network of Nashville’s young professionals committed to the mission of Conexión Américas. The group provides members with professional development and volunteer opportunities focused on inclusivity, diversity, and advocacy.

SPOTLIGHT:

Austin is a familiar face at Casa Azafrán, as he has volunteered with Conexión Américas for several years. While parents improve their English language skills in our English classes, Austin provides childcare for their kids.

Good starts with your small acts of kindness, and you probably won’t ever fully realize the impact you’re making. But, the people on the receiving end are aware, and it is worth it.

Conexión Américas Senior Leadership Team

José González

Our Co-Founder and Finance Director co-founded Conexión Américas 18 years ago, and remains an essential part of our day-to-day operations. He derives his motivation from seeing the grit of program participants, the entrepreneurial spirit of Negocio Próspero participants, and the compassion of his colleagues. With José’s leadership, and his famous paella, Conexión Américas is well-positioned to continue serving Latino families across the state.

Tara Lentz

Our Senior Director of Strategic Growth, Tara helps us think about where we’ve been, where we’re going, and what it will take to get there. She started out as an intern, and now has been on staff for 13 years. Tara has seen Conexión Américas grow and change as Nashville changes. We are grateful for her wisdom and experience.

Martha Silva

Our Senior Director of Economic Integration, Martha Silva oversees a number of Conexión Américas economic opportunity programs supporting immigrant families on their way to achieving their version of the American dream. For 10 years Martha has helped Conexión Américas respond to crises—from the floods in 2010, to the March 3, 2020 tornado, and now the COVID-19 pandemic. We are grateful for Martha’s steadfast commitment to Nashville’s immigrant community.
